HEALTH SERVICES VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

ADMINISTRATION OF HEALTH INSTITUTIONS

Dear students,

Healthcare services are one of the most crucial indicators of a nation's socio-economic development level and constitute a rapidly expanding service sector. The fundamental objective of healthcare services is to deliver the necessary healthcare services to the community at the appropriate time, quality, and level. Consequently, healthcare services have emerged as a significant component of our modern economy. In our country, to ensure the efficient and high-quality delivery of healthcare services and the effective management of healthcare institutions using a contemporary business approach, healthcare institutions require highly qualified human resources. The healthcare management program plays a pivotal role in cultivating this qualified human resource.

The primary goal of the healthcare management program is to train qualified intermediate personnel who possess a thorough understanding of the sector, actively monitor developments and innovations within the field, exhibit strong communication and coordination skills, possess knowledge of healthcare management at various levels, and have acquired healthcare-specific knowledge and expertise.

The Tarsus University Healthcare Management Program commenced its educational operations in the 2019-2020 academic year, and its curriculum has been meticulously crafted to align with the expectations of contemporary conditions. In addition to economics and business courses, our curriculum encompasses a wide range of field courses that will directly contribute to your professional development, including medical documentation, healthcare management, and information systems in healthcare institutions.

Our department boasts a team of highly specialized academic staff dedicated to providing undergraduate education at the forefront of technological advancements and market expectations.

We extend a warm welcome to our prospective students to join us at our university, where we are committed to empowering our students to embark on their professional journeys with a solid foundation and unwavering confidence. We wish you all the best in your academic endeavors and throughout all stages of your life.
